

Dr. Pepper- Oral Script

By Don L. Wulffson

Hires Root Beer was named after the man who concocted it in 1876, Charles E. Hires. Dr. Pepper has a stranger story behind how it was invented and named.

Working at a pharmacy in Virginia around 1880 was a young man (whose name has been lost to posterity). The young man, a “soda jerk,” fell in love with the pharmacist’s daughter. Putting a quick end to the romance, the pharmacist fired the young man and told him to get out of town and never show his face again.

Jobless and broken-hearted, the young man went west, eventually ending up in Waco, Texas. There he got a job, naturally enough, at a local soda fountain. In time, the young man became well-known for two things: the story of his unhappy romance back in Virginia and his knack for brewing up original soft drinks.

As a joke, the young man’s customers named his best soft drink after the pharmacist who had caused his broken heart. The pharmacist’s name was Dr. Pepper

E. Hires Dr. Pepper had a stranger story behind him. One day he hired a man to work at the pharmacy with him. In this little story it does not note the he hired's name.
The man he hired saw Dr. Peppers daughter but his hope of being with her were crushed when Dr. Pepper fires the man and tells him he does not want to see his face in the city ever again. Jobless and downhearted
the man heads south and ends up in Waco Texas. One day he brewed up a soft drink and called DR. PEPPER.

Dr. Pepper

I think it's about a Dr named Dr. Pepper that invented Dr Pepper Cola.

He tried to make a love life but no one liked the boy who was called "Soda Jerk"

But then he had an idea to make Dr. Pepper because he loved soda so much.

People invented root beer in 1876
but that was before Dr. Pepper 1880 was when Dr. Pepper
was invented.

There was a young man who fell in love with a Pharmacist's daughter. The Pharmacist told the boy to leave town and never to show his face again. The young man went west and got a job at a local soda fountain. The young man became famous for his stories of his unhappy romance and his knack for making up his own kinds of pop. As a joke some of his customers named his best soda after the Pharmacist and his name was Dr. Pepper!
